Small Church, Big Heart: Walnut Street Baptist Church Seeks Out New Ways to Connect with the Local Community

On the outskirts of Indianapolis in the small town of Lebanon, Indiana, the Walnut Street Baptist Church serves a small community of believers and actively looks for new ways to reach out to others. Their success comes from a dedication to serve and a passion for bringing the community closer together.

The Church Believed a Youth Center Could Help with Outreach. But As Any Ministry Knows, Reaching Out to Kids Can Be Tough

BEAM provides a WOW factor

BEAM virtual playgrounds are a new technology, and seeing one in action for the first time is an amazing experience. The Walnut Street Church used this WOW factor to great effect.

Kids of all ages enjoy BEAM

The Walnut Street Church realized younger children had trouble with traditional games like ice hockey. BEAM's easy-to-learn games help the church interact with children as young as two.

Even parents love BEAM

Pastor Steve Rance noticed immediately how even parents had fun engaging with BEAM, giving entire families within the community an opportunity to spend time together in a fun setting.

BEAM Is a Hit with the Walnut Street Baptist Church Community. And the Youth Center Is More Vibrant Than Ever

The youth center opened to great fanfare in April of 2016 and has remained a strong attraction ever since. Pastor Steve believes BEAM will continue to be a draw with the local community for months and years to come.

Final Result

BEAM helped the Walnut Street Baptist Church launch a successful youth center that has helped bring the community closer together.

"We were looking to use it for outreach, as an attraction to get children in the neighborhood a youth center with some variety. We had air hockey and games like that, but nothing at all for younger children, 3-5 year old. We wanted to give them some activity to do, and it's done just that."
